AT THE ORPHEUM.
The Orpheum gives final performances of the present bill tonight. After several changes it has been finally arranged in a pleasing manner. Mysterious magical tricks of Asahi and his troupe of oriental entertainers is very interesting. Larry Comer, well known here, sings new ballads and rags time songs with lots of harmony and spirit. The dramatic act of Hugo B. Koch and his two assistant players, is well presented. Gilroy and Coffey please with well staged fooling and Williams and Rankin are expert cornetists.

Beginning Thursday Josie Flynn and her merry minstrel maids will top line the new bill. Comments from other cities indicate that Miss Flynn is clever and has a pleasing novelty in black and white face. Six attractive girls assist the principal. They exchange fast patter, living up to the reputation of the proverbial end men. All of the girls are tall and stately and when they change from promenade suits to evening dress the ensemble is very pleasing. Silber and North, on the same bill, offer a song and comedy talking act that is said to convulse the audience with the wit of the sables. Ralph and Bayhal, are European novelty artists who promise something new and Gedmin is a Russian shadowgraphist.

THE AUDITORIUM.
Today's Auditorium bill includes "Greater Than Art," a three reel Edison, featuring Gertrude McCoy and Edward Earle and tells of the beautiful love and sacrifice of an art student for her blind lover, "Boobley's Baby," a Vitagraph comedy with Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew and the regular edition of the New Exploits of Elaine. Tomorrow brings the second episode of the beautiful serial story, "The Goddess" featuring those two popular players, Earle Williams and Anita Stewart, the Selig weekly of current news, "The Police Dog," one of Bray's funny cartoon comedies and "A Pillar of Flame," a two-part Vitagraph featuring Norma Talmadge and Harry Morey. GUARD GERMAN EMBASSY AT WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON.—A strong cordon of guards have been thrown about the German embassy to protect the German ambassador, Count von Bernstorff and his wife and the embassy's attaches. It is reported that many threats of death have been received by the ambassador since the sinking of the Lusitania.

Danby is a selfish woman with an ambition to become a great singer, so she leaves her husband and child Beatrice to take up vocal lessons with Julius Gerhardt, a celebrated music teacher. Encouraged by his flattery, she continues her lessons until her money is gone then she asks him for the public appearance he had promised her. But he fails her in this and she is too proud to go back to her husband, so she gets employment singing in a cheap cabaret. Years later, Danby is married again to a quiet middle-aged woman, who makes Beatrice a good mother, who has inherited a craze for music and the stage. One day Madeline under the name of Yashti Vetsara, decides to drop in and say hello to Danby. He is horrified when she smilingly introduces herself. At dinner she meets Mrs. Danby, the second and makes things very uncomfortable for all concerned. Then Beatrice and Madeline come face to face and she tells Beatrice she will take her back with her to the stage, but her better nature asserts itself and recoiling at the thought she exacts a promise from Beatrice to give up all thoughts of the stage, then dies in her daughter's arms.

AT THE LASALLE.

the "vampire woman," in the role of a fascinating artist's model. No more powerful sermon was ever preached than "The Clemenceau Case." No more vivid, pulsating drama was ever written. No more wonderful photoplay has ever been beheld upon the screen. These statements are made without reservation. Like a mighty river the story of the drama rushes strong and swift to its cataclysmic climax. Passionate flare and wills clash throughout the production in a way that grips the spectator, holding him breathless in his chair till the last great scene is reached and the well-nigh overwhelming story of "The Clemenceau Case" is brought to its tremendous end.

No one under 16 years of age will be admitted and the prices will be advanced. Thursday the Lasalle will show the popular melodrama of a half century ago, "The Shadows of a Great City." Rewritten for screen presentation and with a splendid cast that features Adelaide Thurston and Thomas Jefferson it is, indeed a feature attraction. It has been pronounced a play of thrills, typically American and eminently interesting. A worthy young man is falsely accused of murder and imprisoned. He learns that the man he is supposed to have murdered, is alive and enraged at the injustice of his sentence, he breaks jail and swims the icy waters of the dread East River, chases through the crowded east side streets of the great city, eludes his pursuers, takes a train at the great Grand Central terminal, rushes through the new Equitable building to the top of the Woolworth building, the tallest in the world, dangles from this dizzy height on a painter's rope.

That is enough to indicate the nature of this adventurous romance. THE NEW HENRIETTA. Maclyn Arbuckle, who was a Texas lawyer before he entered on his career as an actor, was just as congenial and as popular in the days when his shingle hung out with "Attorney-at-law" under his name, as he has been since he donned sock and buskin and made a reputation for himself as one of the famous comedians of the day. Wherever he is playing if there are Texans in town they are sure to find their way to the theater and afterwards some method of meeting the jolly comedian and offering their congratulations. At one of the recent performances of "The New Henrietta" in Chicago, where Mr. Arbuckle was associated with William H. Crane, Thomas W. Ross, Amelia Bingham and Mabel Taliaferro in the five star company playing "The New Henrietta," a block of seats in the body of the house was taken by a Texas delegation and during the last act of the comedy, where the Rev. Murray Hilton, the part played by Mr. Arbuckle, sees the earth slipping from under his feet and the handsome widow upon whom he has been casting loving eyes bestow her hand upon his rival, multi-millionaire Van Ailsyne, the delegation of Texans rose as one man shouted the Texas war whoop at the disconsolate and discomfited Hilton. They wanted to show their sympathy with that reverend rascal's plight and to assure him that if he had no friends in the play he had plenty in the audience. The action of the Texans almost created a riot in the theater, but they finally subsided to see the curtain fall very shortly after their demonstration. One of the most important events of the season here will be the performance of "The New Henrietta," with the splendid five star cast brought intact from its long and triumphant run in New York and Chicago. "The New Henrietta" will be seen at the Oliver Saturday matinee and night.

AT THE COLONIAL.

Mae Marsh and Robert Herron have the leading roles in the feature picture at the Colonial today called "The Outcast." It is a big city story of a girl of the slums, who fights her way upward and wins happiness at last. A fine scenic production is given in the story and a capable cast presents the dramatic roles.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

Motion pictures from the Mutual studio, of varied themes and pleasing contrast are shown at the Majestic, with daily change of program.

LAUREL CIVIC CLUB MEETS

Raise Funds From Program to Purchase Victrola.

One of the most interesting programs of the year was presented at the regular meeting of the Laurel Civic club, Tuesday night at the regular meeting of the Laurel Civic club. The program, which was one of folk dances, songs and drills, was presented by the school children, and pleased the large audience which packed the school auditorium. The entertainment was presented for the purpose of raising money for the Victrola fund, and was very successful. Among the numbers on the lengthy program were "highland fling" and "Swedish weaving dance," by girls from the high school; flag drill, fifth and sixth grades; Maypole dance, fifth grade girls; "Irish Rilt," sixth grade girls; dumb-bell drill, boys of the sixth grade, and a vocal solo by James Cover.
